High strength Superplasticizer readymix concrete admixtures

High strength Superplasticizer readymix concrete admixtures are chemicals that are added in the process of mixing concrete and account for less than the quality of cement, which can significantly improve the performance of concrete. High strength Superplasticizer readymix concrete admixtures are characterized by large variety, small dosage, and great influence on the performance of concrete. With the progress of science and technology, the admixture has been applied more and more. The admixture has become the fifth important component of concrete except the four basic components.

High strength Superplasticizer readymix concrete admixtures improves the carbonation resistance of concrete, and there is a linear relationship between the carbonation depth and porosity of concrete. The admixture has great influence on the freezability of concrete, the concrete with air-entraining water-reducing agent has better freezability, but the concrete with single early strength agent has no improvement on the freezability.
